

INDIES

India News > The Mumbai Atelier That's Designed Costumes For Nicole Kidman

The Mumbai Atelier That's Designed Costumes For Nicole Kidman

Chetan Desai does not divulge the current clients on his books but his past roster gives a sense of the high demand. They include Jean Paul Gaultier, Yohji Yamamoto and Donna Karan.

India News | Agence France-Presse | Updated: January 24, 2023 11:07 am IST

TRENDING

61 Killed, 150 Injured In Taliban Suicide Attack At Mosque In Pakistan

Google Executive Fired For Rejecting Female Boss' Advances: Report

Crisis-Hit Pakistan Takes Hard Steps To Secure Bailout From IMF

Beauty Shradha Kapoor's Favourite Makeup Look

Fashion Aishwarya Rai's Saree Style

SHOPPING

iQOO Z6 Lite 5G by vivo (Stellar Green, 6GB RAM, 128GB Storage) ₹15,499 amazon.in (18% off)

Samsung Galaxy Buds Live Truly Wireless Earbuds, ... ₹3,999 amazon.in (74% off)

Airdopes 141 TWS Earbuds (Bold Black) ₹998 amazon.in (77% off)

In the 1990s, Chetan Desai worked on dresses that graced the likes of Naomi Campbell.

Mumbai: Sitting in a lotus position, four men weave glittering beads through gold thread on an organza sheet, carefully constructing a wedding dress that will soon wow crowds at Paris Fashion Week.

For once, the French couturier behind the design, Julien Fournie, is determined to put these craftsmen in the spotlight: his new collection, showing in Paris on Tuesday, is entirely made with fabrics from Mumbai.

He says a sort of "design imperialism" means that French fashion houses often play down the fact that their fabrics are made outside France.

"The houses which don't admit it are perhaps afraid of losing their clientele," Fournie told AFP.

But that is absurd, he continued.

"India is number one in the world in embroidery. It's ancestral. They've been dressing maharajas in gold-embroidered outfits since the 16th century."

Fournie works with a company called Creations By Shanagar (meaning "to adorn" in Sanskrit), housed in a non-descript beige building near Mumbai's international airport.

Dozens of men in grey polo shirts sit cross-legged on cushions, heads bent over large sheaths of fabric. There is silence but for the clicking of needles and beads, the whirl of ceiling fans, and the occasional plane overhead.

- 'A lot of fantasy' -

For decades, they have played an essential but unsung role in the fashion industries of Europe, Japan and the United States.

"I like working with Julien because he is another master craftsman who knows his subject very well," said director Chetan Desai, 55.

"He has a lot of fantasy. He comes up with his own concepts and I have to translate those ideas into embroidery.

"It has been a very challenging experience and at the same time, it has been very fruitful," he added.

Back in France, Fournie sends the compliments back.

"What they know how to do better than anyone is to embroider with degraded gold thread, passing it through transparent beads to create colour gradients. It's unprecedented," he said.

It gives silk an aged, elegant look for wedding dresses that "shine, but not too much".

"Haute couture customers don't want to look like a Christmas tree," he added.

"I've worked with great French embroiderers and each time it's complicated. Everyone wants to put in their own ideas and you never get exactly what you want."

- Star clients -

Desai's father set up Creations By Shanagar in the 1960s as a workshop for handloomed and embroidered saris.

In the 1990s, Desai looked further afield to France, partnering with Franco-Tunisian designer Azzedine Alaïa on dresses that ultimately graced the likes of Naomi Campbell.

He does not divulge the current clients on his books but his past roster gives a sense of the high demand. They include Jean Paul Gaultier, Yohji Yamamoto and Donna Karan.

Even Hollywood came knocking, with Shanagar helping design Nicole Kidman's costumes for the 2001 hit "Moulin Rouge!".

The atelier attracts workers from across India, such as Biswajit Patra, 31, who has been working here since he was 16.

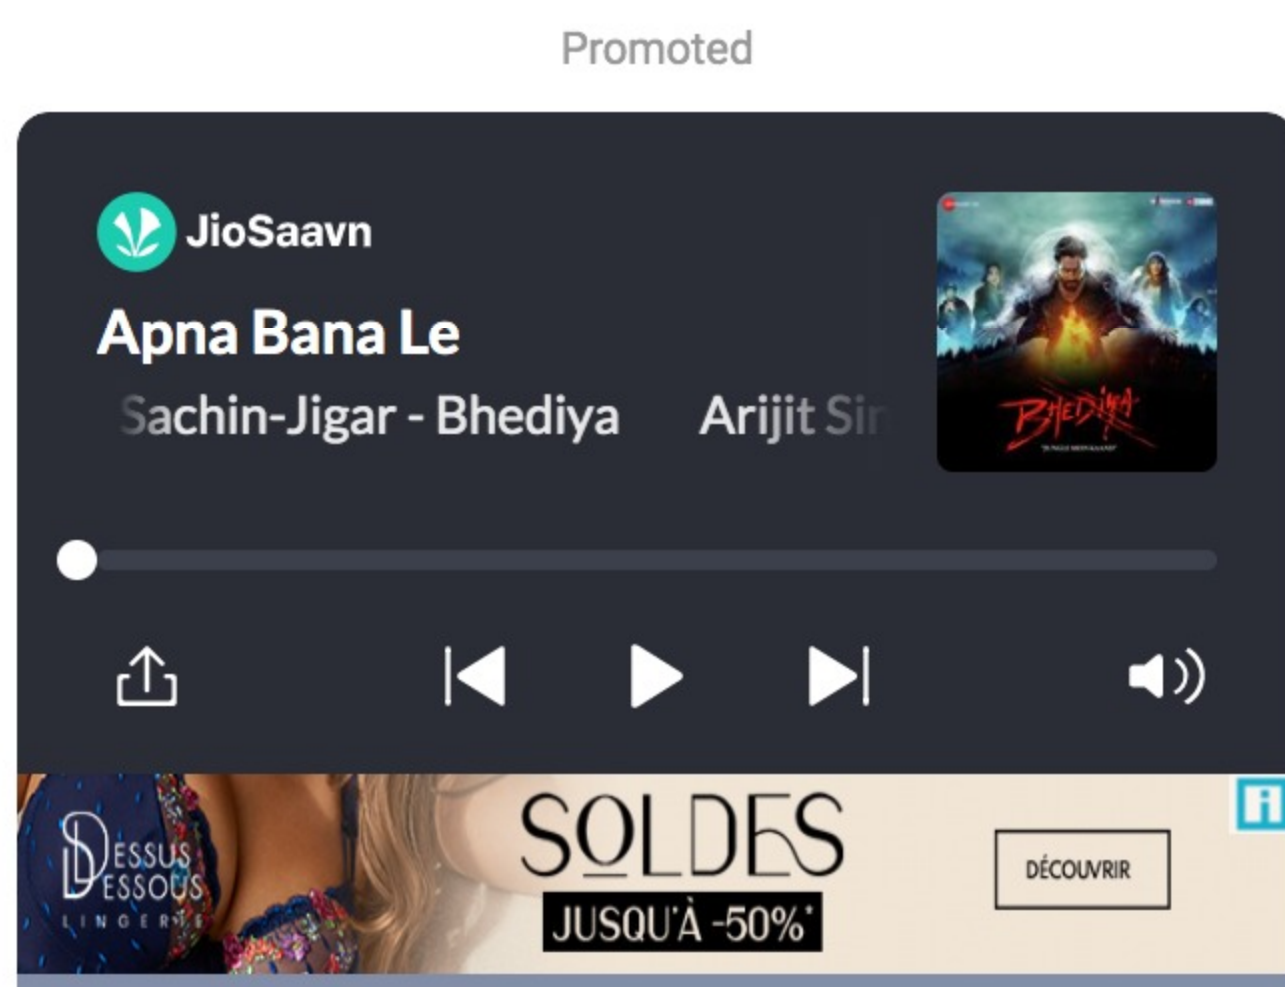

"I learned the trade in my village near Kolkata because my father was doing the same job and my brother and sister are also doing this job," he said.

Among their unique ideas is a way of rolling up pieces of tulle to make embroidered flowers.

"They have a range of techniques that we don't have here," said Jean-Paul Cauvin, director of Fournie's house in France.

One of the most delicate jobs is preparing the fabric once it arrives from India and heads for the workshop where it will be assembled into the dresses.

It is Fournie himself who irons out the fabric.

"Sixty percent of haute couture is ironing," he said with a smile.

(Except for the headline, this story has not been edited by NDTV staff and is published from a syndicated feed.)

Post a comment

FEATURED VIDEO OF THE DAY

"Save Democracy," Says Priyanka Gandhi At Congress Yatra Finale

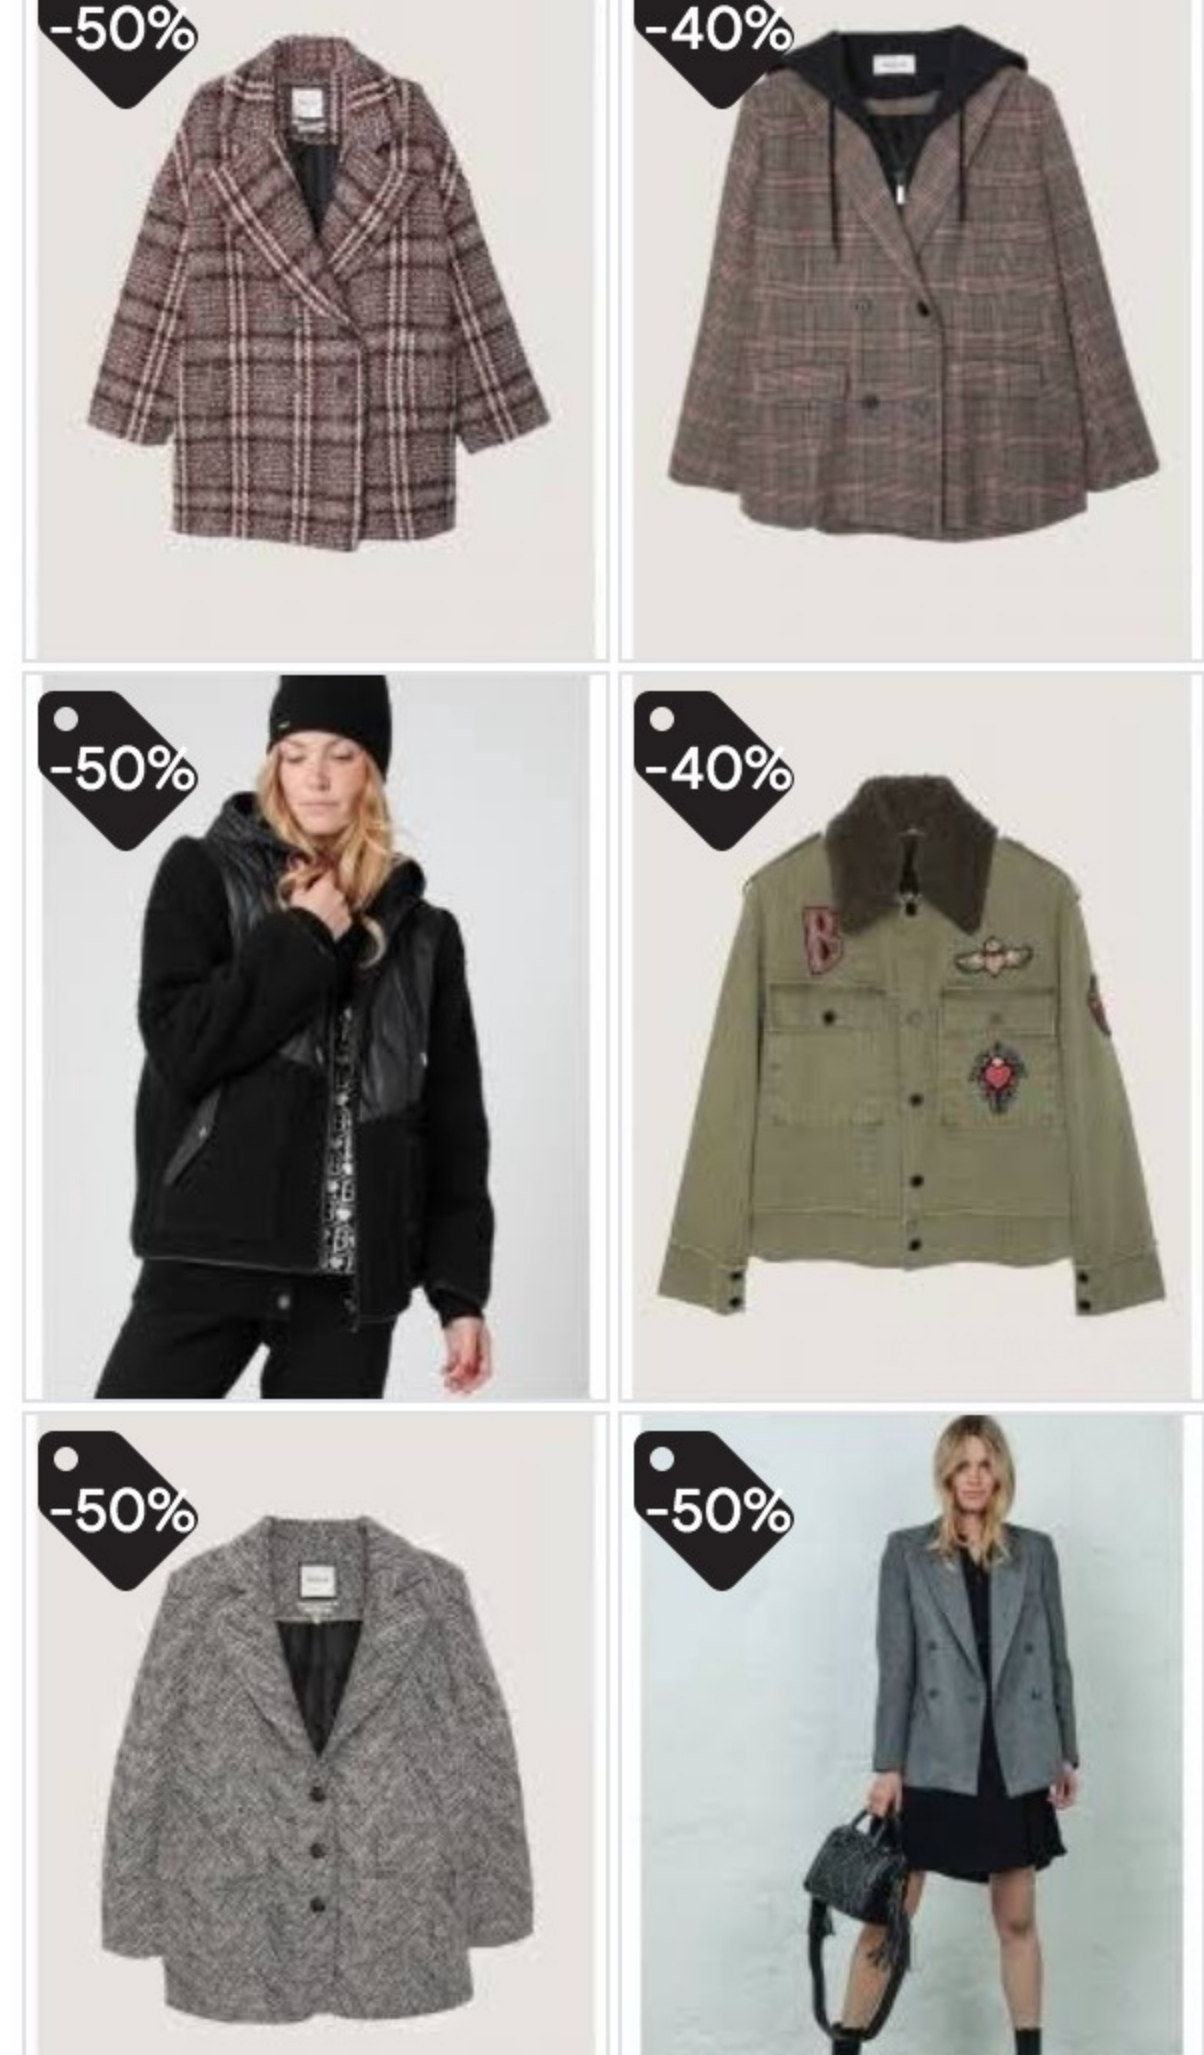

Track Latest News Live on NDTV.com and get news updates from India and around the world.

WATCH LIVE NEWS: NDTV 24x7, NDTV 360 FOLLOW US: Twitter, Facebook, Instagram

chetan desai, Nicole Kidman, Paris fashion

Taboola Feed

Advertisement

Livraison Offerte dès 200€

Advertisement

Advertisement

En ce moment, les Bonnes Rénovations sont chez Lapeyre

Rendez-vous dans votre magasin Lapeyre Richard Lenoir pour en profiter

Advertisement

QUICK LINKS

Odisha Health Minister Injured Business News Coronavirus Cases Hindi News Latest News

Tech News India News World News Sports News New Hindi Movie PNR Status

Live Train status Assembly Election 2023 Wrestling Protest Hair Wax for Men Laptops

Mobile News Rahul Gandhi Yatra Beating Retreat Ceremony Women's U19 T20 World Cup Final

India vs New Zealand Live

SHORT VIDEOS

Advertisement

TELESHOPPING

LATEST NEWS

Quantum Computing Will Be At The Core Of India's Tech growth: IT Minister

NASA Image Shows Mars Craters Looking Like A Teddy Bear

Watch: Mother Elephant Teaches Her Baby How To Cross A Road With Caution

100 Students From Kerala School Hospitalised, Food Poisoning Suspected

Rajeev Singh Raghuvanshi Appointed As Drugs Controller General Of India